Nations Urged To Agree On Problems And Not Abandon Efforts

NEW YORK, Aug. 1—Trygve Lie, secretary general of the United Nations, warned today that the organization has failed to measure up to expectations and that the power of veto imposes an obligation upon the big five nations to agree among themselves.

"As in the control of atomic power, the choice is between life and death," Lie declared in a work summary report to the UN general assembly. "The failure of the United Nations would mean the failure of peace, the triumph of destruction."

Without mentioning specifically Russia's frequent use of her veto power in the security council, Lie pointed out that many issues before the council had arisen from an inability to agree, and he added:

"I should be failing in my duty in presenting this report, if I do not emphasize the absolute necessity that the powers should seek agreement among themselves, in a spirit of mutual understanding and a will to compromise, and not abandon their efforts until such an agreement has been reached."

Lie recalled a paragraph of the United Nations prepatory commission's report, which read: "If by its early actions the new organization can capture the imagination of the world it will surely not belie the expectations of those who see in it the last chance of saving themselves and their children from the scourges of war."

"Where do we stand now, six months after these words were written?" Lie asked.

"Has the United Nations succeeded in capturing the imagination and in harnessing the enthusiasm of the peoples of the world? I, for one, do not feel that it has done so in the degree that might be hoped for. What is the explanation, and what measures can, or should be, taken?"

Lie explained that UN proceedings were necessarily slow, due to its preoccupation with procedure and organization at this stage, and that the public could be "educated" to appreciate more the "often undramatic but fundamental work" that is being done.

Lie pledged the UN secretariat to do all it can to "correct certain widespread misunderstandings" concerning the charter.

"The United Nations," he said. (Continued on Page Two)

ATTLEE, TRUMAN CONFER ON PALESTINE

LONDON, Aug. 1—Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee came back to London from Paris today for hasty cabinet discussions on Palestine and was reported to have telephoned President Truman concerning reports that the United States opposes the Palestine partition plan.

Attlee flew here from Paris and went into almost immediate conference with the cabinet at No. 10 Downing street. He was reported to have discussed with Mr. Truman questions arising from his talks about Palestine with Secretary of State James F. Byrnes in Paris.

A foreign office spokesman at the same time took occasion again to deny that Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin may quit. He said the reports were without grounds and that Bevin's health was improving.

The Daily Herald, labor party organ, said the Attlee government was disturbed over Mr. Truman's announcement summoning the American committee of Palestine experts back to Washington for consultation. The White House announcement was a surprise to the British.

(A Washington dispatch said American officials hinted strongly that Mr. Truman has decided to reject the plan to divide Palestine into four federated provinces. Britain has approved the plan Mr. Truman was reported as dissatisfied over the American commission's approval of the plan.)

JERUSALEM, Aug. 1—The British army found another big cache of illegal arms today in Tel Aviv, where another 600 persons were detained on the third day of a search of the city.

As the search for the perpetrators of the King David hotel bombing went on relentlessly, hundreds of illegal Jewish immigrants arrived off the coast of Palestine.

Quantities of mortar shells, bombs and ammunition for small arms were taken from their hiding place in the basement of a Tel Aviv school. The hidden store was the second found within 24 hours.

Elsewhere in Tel Aviv the searching British found small amounts of arms. Raiding parties were making other finds on a relatively small scale in various parts of the country.

Army officials said the discovery at dawn today was in addition to the supply of arms found yesterday in Tel Aviv's great synagogue.

The entire Holy Land seemed on the verge of martial law as the 20,000 British soldiers ranged through the Jewish community, questioning all residents and checking identifications.

Stringent measures were being considered by the government to end illegal immigration. Another refugee ship—the third within a week—was sighted off the coast.

PARIS, Aug. 1—Foreign Minister Edouard Kerdjof of Yugoslavia today rejected the big four decision to internationalize Trieste, and denounced the proposed Italian-Yugoslav border as a "negation of all the principles fought for in the war."

PARIS, Aug. 1—Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov unexpectedly smoothed the work of the peace conference procedure commission today by sponsoring two compromises, designed to give the small powers a greater voice in treaty deliberations.

Molotov's compromises appeared to be in line with the new role which he has assumed in the initial peace sessions in which he has taken a conciliatory line in contrast with his hard bargaining tactics in big four discussions.

The first Molotov compromise won unanimous acceptance by the procedure commission and ended a bitter wrangle between members of the Soviet, bloc and Greek. Greece wanted the commission to agree that any item pertaining to a "just and durable peace" could be added to the conference agenda by a simple majority vote.

Molotov's compromise allows the conference to put on its agenda at the request of any delegation "any questions pertaining to the peace treaties." It does not mention what vote will be required and this issue will be decided when the commission takes up the big four proposal for two-thirds rule.

The second Molotov compromise was offered in place of a Dutch suggestion that all of the 21 nations at the conference have a place on each of the five commissions which will handle the treaties for Italy, Bulgaria, Hungary, Romania and Finland.

The big four recommended that membership of each commission be restricted to nations actually participating in war against each satellite.

Molotov said that the big four suggestion should be followed but that all nations should be allowed to sit on the commissions with the right to participate in deliberations but without the right to vote.

Herbert V. Evatt, Australian foreign minister, who has tangled repeatedly with Molotov supported him on both compromises. He also won British and French support. The Dutch plan was rejected by (Continued on Page Two)

YOUNG MATRON FLED FOLLOWING FAMILY 'SPAT'

STATE LINE, Nev., Aug. 1—Shapely Mrs. Barbara Walker styled herself a "poor fiber" today and admitted that her story about being abducted by a "clean-cut young man" was a hoax.

The attractive young matron turned up waiting on tables at a high Sierra roadside cafe. She had been the object of a nationwide search since last Thursday, when she disappeared from a family picnic at Echo Lake, N. H.

Under the sympathetic questioning of Sheriff Lowell O. West, Mrs. Walker broke down and admitted that her disappearance was the aftermath of a spat with her husband at the picnic.

"I changed into a dress in the car," she said. "I intended to drive to Boston, but I couldn't get the car started so I walked."

She said she left her slacks and other personal effects near the car so her family would think she had been kidnapped. Then she boarded a plane in Boston and arrived in Reno, Nev., on Sunday.

"I saw an ad in a Reno paper that a waitress was wanted at the victory cafe so I came here Monday and took the job."

MAY COMMITTEE PROBED ACTION ON RUBINSTEIN

Col. Goble Says He Was Asked Why He Did Not Defer New York Financier

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 1—Col. Chester Goble, head of selective service in Ohio, said here today that he was asked by a counsel for Rep. Andrew May's house military affairs committee why he did not defer international financier Serge Rubinstein of New York City.

Colonel Goble said that H. Ralph Burton, general counsel of a subcommittee of the military affairs committee, demanded to know "by what authority" he refused to grant a personal deferment to Rubinstein.

The Ohio selective service head said he replied "there is nothing in the regulations whereby a state director of selective service has to defend his action in refusing to grant deferments."

The interview took place in Washington and was the climax of a series of attempts by Rubinstein and employees of the military affairs subcommittee to obtain Rubinstein's deferment on grounds that he was essential to operation of the Taylorcraft Aviation Company at Alliance, O., the colonel said.

The interview took place in November, 1943, four days before Rubinstein was scheduled to report to his New York City draft board for induction.

BREAD, FLOUR INCREASE DUE

Porter And Anderson Plan Cent Boost; Board Plans Hearings

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—Price Administrator Paul Porter and Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson may decide today to boost the retail price of bread one cent a loaf and the price of flour at least one cent a pound.

The bread and flour price increases have been recommended to the two agency chiefs by OPA's food price branch.

The boosts would compensate millers and bakers for higher wheat prices and the ending of the flour subsidy. Wheat will be decontrolled under the new OPA bill unless the new decontrol board puts it back under price ceilings by Aug. 20.

The flour subsidy, which lapsed June 30, is not expected to be reinstated. No determination has been made on whether OPA or the decontrol board has the right to drop flour subsidies permanently.

A penny-a-pound increase in flour would require higher prices on crackers, cookies and other bakery products as well as bread. The action would mean about a $1.11 price increase on flour at the (Continued on Page Two)

CRIPPLED GIRL FREED

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 1—A 19-year-old paralytic girl, confined to a wheel chair since she was four years old, was free without bond today after investigation indicated she killed her step-father in self-defense. State's Attorney John Curren termed the shooting "justifiable homicide" and released Jacqueline Colburn to her mother without bond. No charges were placed against the girl.

PICKAWAY GRAIN EXPANSION DUE

Capacity To Be Doubled By Construction Of More Storage Bins Here

Work on an addition to the Circleville elevator of the Pickaway Grain Company, which will double its capacity and will cost $80,000 to $90,000, is scheduled to begin within 30 days, it was announced Thursday by Herbert Snyder, company manager.

Application of the company to enlarge the elevator has been approved Wednesday by the Columbus district construction committee of the Civilian Production Administration.

Snyder explained that the projected addition to the elevator will have a storage capacity of 100,000 bushels and the modern grain-drying equipment which is to be installed will have a capacity of 750 bushels per hour.

When the work is completed, probably late in the fall, the elevator will have four times its original capacity, the expansion having been made as a result of the increased volume of business.

The elevator is located on North Western avenue and the company's office is situated at 121 South Western avenue. The Pickaway Grain Company is a farmer-owned corporation, with approximately 160 farmers owning stock in the company.

MANY OFFICIALS IMPRISONED IN RUSSIAN PURGE

MOSCOW, Aug. 1—Soviet prosecutors, pressing a purge of industry throughout Russia, were reported today to have sent many local officials to prison for long terms.

The newspaper Pravda reported progress in the countrywide campaign against corruption and bribery in Soviet industry. At the same time the Communist organ blamed the tie-in between party and military leadership for faked industrial and agricultural production figures which Pravda indicated had developed on a big scale.

The chief of a housing district in Moscow, a woman named N. Ignatova was sentenced to 10 years imprisonment and a woman inspector to eight years for taking bribes up to 3,000 rubles for illegally assigning rooms, Pravda said.

PRESIDENT ASKS REDUCTION OF EXPENDITURES

Federal Department, Agency Heads Urged To Cut Costs To Fight Inflation

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—President Truman today called on heads of federal departments and agencies to reduce expenditures as much as possible to combat inflation and to alleviate "a most serious" government financial situation.

"Our present fiscal situation is a most serious one," the President said in a letter to government department and agency heads.

"We are faced with a continued substantial budget deficit in the present fiscal year," he added.

Mr. Truman said that even the "most necessary" federal expenditures increased inflationary pressure on the total national economy.

One of the most effective means of reducing this pressure, he said, is the reduction of federal expenditures.

Mr. Truman has sent letters dealing with specific programs to the heads of a few departments. For example, he has asked the secretaries of war and navy and the maritime commission to reduce expenditures substantially below their original budget program for this fiscal year.

He pointed out in his letter that he had also asked for the postponement of public works so far as possible.

The President will engage in a more detailed review of the present government financial picture in a special budget seminar to be held at the White House at 3 p. m. tomorrow afternoon. He is expected to announce budget estimates for fiscal 1947 shortly.

In his letter today, Mr. Truman asked for an immediate review of all departmental and agency expenditures and told the department and agency heads not to hesitate to eliminate low priority work.

He also advised them not to overlook smaller economies. He told them not to compete with popular demand for scarce items.

He urged improved departmental efficiency and use of personnel to help absorb the recent government pay increases authorized by congress.

GENERALS URGE PREPAREDNESS IN AAF TALKS

TOKYO, Aug. 1—A call to fully-armed preparedness today keynoteed messages from Gen. Douglas MacArthur and two high-ranking generals to American occupation troops in the air force.

Speaking over the radio after 30 B-29 Superfortresses roared in low over Japanese cities, MacArthur wished air force personnel, "limitless peaceful returns of this day."

"Army Air Forces have played a vital part in two world wars," the supreme commander said. "The superb co-ordination which existed between three great arms of service—ground, sea and air—not only brought victory in the Pacific but saved innumerable lives by materially shortening the war."

Admits Booby Trap

JAMES N. BOWDEN, 47, has admitted to Portland, Ore., police that he devised a dynamite "booby trap" which blew his wife, Mrs. Fern Bowden, 44, to bits. Bowden blames his wife's curiosity for tripping a trap "meant for a man friend of my wife," he told police. (International)

FIRE DESTROYS 2 LARGE BARN

Wolford And Armstrong Buildings Burn After Lightning Strikes

Fire that raged after lightning struck a barn on the farm of John Wolford, Jr., on U. S. Route 23, nine miles south of Circleville, at 4:30 p. m. Wednesday, completely destroyed the barn which contained 85 tons of hay, quantities of grain and feed, and equipment which included a grinder, feeder, gasoline engine, etc.

The loss amounted to several thousand dollars although Wolford, who said the loss was fully covered by insurance, was unable to give a definite estimate of the damage. He said no livestock was in the structure.

Lester Wolford, 34, narrowly escaped death or serious injury. When lightning struck in a nearby field he ran from the barn to investigate. He had taken only a few steps after emerging from the structure when a second lightning bolt hit the barn. It burst into flames almost immediately.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1—Plans to mobilize 6,000,000 CIO votes behind liberal candidates from both major political parties in the coming Fall elections were announced today, after the first meeting of the CIO political action committee's new governing board.

A $6,000,000 campaign fund, obtained by $1 contributions from every CIO union member, will be sought in a nationwide drive.

Jack Kroll, new director of the PAC since the death of Sidney Hillman, said there was no possibility of PAC support of a new third party.

"We will continue to function within the framework of the two major political parties," Kroll said.

"Our present fiscal situation is a most serious one," the President said in a letter to government department and agency heads.

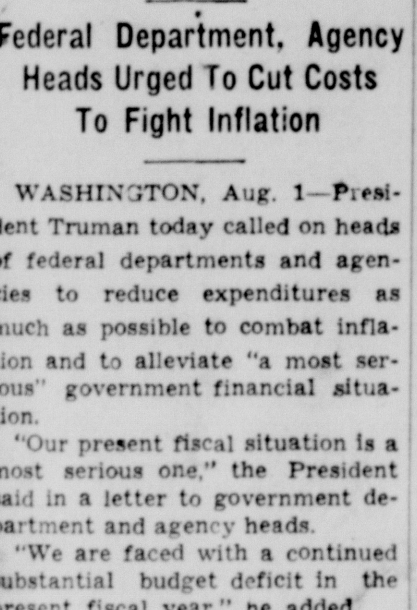

"We are faced with a continued substantial budget deficit in the present fiscal year," he added.

Mr. Truman said that even the "most necessary" federal expenditures increased inflationary pressure on the total national economy.

One of the most effective means of reducing this pressure, he said, is the reduction of federal expenditures.

Mr. Truman has sent letters dealing with specific programs to the heads of a few departments. For example, he has asked the secretaries of war and navy and the maritime commission to reduce expenditures substantially below their original budget program for this fiscal year.

FIRE DESTROYS 2 LARGE BARN

Wolford And Armstrong Buildings Burn After Lightning Strikes

Fire that raged after lightning struck a barn on the farm of John Wolford, Jr., on U. S. Route 23, nine miles south of Circleville, at 4:30 p. m. Wednesday, completely destroyed the barn which contained 85 tons of hay, quantities of grain and feed, and equipment which included a grinder, feeder, gasoline engine, etc.

The loss amounted to several thousand dollars although Wolford, who said the loss was fully covered by insurance, was unable to give a definite estimate of the damage. He said no livestock was in the structure.

Lester Wolford, 34, narrowly escaped death or serious injury. When lightning struck in a nearby field he ran from the barn to investigate. He had taken only a few steps after emerging from the structure when a second lightning bolt hit the barn. It burst into flames almost immediately.

PICKAWAY GRAIN EXPANSION DUE

Capacity To Be Doubled By Construction Of More Storage Bins Here

Work on an addition to the Circleville elevator of the Pickaway Grain Company, which will double its capacity and will cost $80,000 to $90,000, is scheduled to begin within 30 days, it was announced Thursday by Herbert Snyder, company manager.

Application of the company to enlarge the elevator has been approved Wednesday by the Columbus district construction committee of the Civilian Production Administration.

Snyder explained that the projected addition to the elevator will have a storage capacity of 100,000 bushels and the modern grain-drying equipment which is to be installed will have a capacity of 750 bushels per hour.

When the work is completed, probably late in the fall, the elevator will have four times its original capacity, the expansion having been made as a result of the increased volume of business.

Ford Blames Strikes For Auto Lag

DETROIT, Aug. 1—Henry Ford II, president of the Ford Motor Company, told United Auto Workers chief Walter Reuther today that an end of strikes in the automotive industry would be the best contribution the union could make toward increased production.

Ford's suggestion was contained in a letter to Reuther, president of the CIO United Auto Workers, in which the motor magnate turned down an invitation to a union-industry conference to discuss increased production. Reuther, said, he was "concerned" over the lag in production, had invited all the major auto makers to the conference.

Ford said the invitation was "misleading" since the answer to lagging production lay in suppliers' strikes plaguing the industry. He pointed out that 25 Ford suppliers were closed by strikes and 16 of the walkouts were called by UAW affiliates.

One of the most critical strikes was at the Federal Bearings Company, Inc., at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and its subsidiary, Waterbury Steel Ball Company, Ford said.

Porter And Anderson Plan Cent Boost; Board Plans Hearings

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—Price Administrator Paul Porter and Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson may decide today to boost the retail price of bread one cent a loaf and the price of flour at least one cent a pound.

The bread and flour price increases have been recommended to the two agency chiefs by OPA's food price branch.

The boosts would compensate millers and bakers for higher wheat prices and the ending of the flour subsidy. Wheat will be decontrolled under the new OPA bill unless the new decontrol board puts it back under price ceilings by Aug. 20.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—The $2,500 check which Rep. John Coffee, D., Washington, received from a war contractor may lead to tightening of laws governing campaign contributions, congressional circles reported today.

Some senators wanted a new law to require every congressman to list every campaign contribution, regardless of whether it was received in a campaign or non-campaign year.

The senate war investigating committee's two-day hearing on the check produced a flood of conflicting testimony, but it emphasized that present laws permit representatives sometimes to go for nearly two years without reporting sums they receive for campaign expenses.

a vote of 11 to 9 with one abstention and Molotov's compromise then was accepted unanimously.

The United States abstained from voting on the Dutch proposal. The Soviet compromise provides that each nation may be heard "fully and comprehensively" before each treaty commission.

The abstention of the United States on the vote surprised the conference almost as much as the unexpected role of Molotov as the mediator between big and little powers.

However, a showdown test of the limits to Molotov's conciliation was postponed when the commission adjourned before getting to the controversial two-thirds rule issue.

Molotov already has expressed a firm stand in favor of the two-thirds rule and is unlikely to compromise.

Under the procedure fixed by the big four and confirmed by the procedure committee today 10 nations will have a vote on the Finnish treaty, 11 on Romania, 12 on Bulgaria and Hungary and all but Norway on Italy.

For the second day in succession the American delegation sat mute throughout the rules debate. However, Secretary of State James F. Byrnes has let it be known that he has a compromise to submit on the two-thirds question.

The rules committee delayed until tomorrow consideration of a Polish appeal to be allowed to participate in making the Hungarian treaty. Poland contended that she was at war with Hungary in fact if not by formality and said that the only reason Hungary didn't declare war on Poland was that she considered Poland nonexistent after 1939.

HOG PRICES SET NEW RECORDS ON MIDWEST MARKET

CHICAGO, Aug. 1—General hog prices at several midwestern stockyards soared to record levels today as choice hogs sold at Chicago for an all-time local high of $24.50 per hundredweight.

The figure was a record in general trading in the United States, a department of agriculture source said. He said that a few loads of hogs sold at Indianapolis for an all-time U. S. record price of $25 in 1919, but the price was not regarded as representative of the general market at that time.

Early Chicago hog prices were a flat $1 higher than yesterday on all weights and sows. Good and choice animals sold for $23.75 to $24.25, with a few top animals going for $24.50.

At Indianapolis, top hog prices were 50 cents higher than yesterday, with a high of $24.25.

The early hog top at East St. Louis, Ill., however, was 25 cents lower than yesterday's all-time local high, with choice hogs selling there for $24.

Meanwhile, the agriculture department said at Washington that if livestock marketings continue at the present heavy pace there may be a five per cent reduction in the number of livestock by next January.

Receipts at the 12 principal western markets continued to drop from the high runs of a few weeks ago. Totals for the 12 markets were: 35,900 cattle, 10,800 calves, 32,300 hogs and 24,600 sheep. Last week's receipts were: 40,725 cattle, 8,876 calves, 47,836 hogs and 26,766 sheep.

Total arrivals to date this week were: 282,100 cattle, 57,500 calves, 145,500 hogs, and 137,600 sheep.

Meanwhile, the new decontrol board announced it will begin hearings Aug. 12 to determine whether to restore price ceilings on livestock, dairy products, grain, cottonseed and soy beans. After Aug. 20, it must decide whether eggs, poultry, petroleum, and tobacco are to be recontrolled.

Board Chairman Roy L. Thompson said the board's recontrol decisions will be based on whether prices have risen reasonably, whether items are in short supply, and whether it would be in the public interest to restore controls.

VANDALS WRECK INTERIOR OF LEGION HOME HERE

Police Chief William F. McCrady said that no robbery occurred but that the intruders tore draperies and rugs, smashed furniture and vases, and "generally wrecked" the Legion quarters.

Chief McCrady said that a search was made for fingerprints and in this effort police were assisted by a fingerprint expert from the Columbus post of the State Highway Patrol. It was undiscovered whether such prints were obtained. Means of access to the quarters was undetermined, police said, but two large front windows were left open when the vandals departed. There was no indication that robbery was the motive for the depredations, and Chief McCrady said it "appeared to be pure vandalism." He said the place was entered sometime after midnight Wednesday.

efforts to save the barn and contents were futile.

Large barn owned by Wayne Armstrong at Laurelville was burned to the ground after lightning hit the structure at 3:30 p. m. Wednesday. A small quantity of hay in the barn, along with a hay loader and a grain drill were consumed by the flames which were battled by Laurelville firemen aided by neighbors who were able to remove livestock from the blazing barn.

Although the loss was not definitely estimated it amounted to several thousand dollars.

DRIVERS INJURED WHEN THEIR AUTOS COLLIDE

Minor injuries were suffered by Mrs. Florence Forquer, 21, Ashville, and Dennis Winner, 48, Route 2, Ashville, according to State Highway Patrolman L. G. Ridenour, when their automobiles collided at 8:30 a. m. Thursday at the intersection of State Route 752 and the Shook road, at the north edge of Ashville.

Patrolman Ridenour said Mrs. Forquer was driving north on the Shook road, and Winner was proceeding west on State Route 752. Both drivers sustained cuts and bruises, Patrolman Ridenour said, and they were removed to their homes after receiving treatment in the office of Dr. R. S. Hosler at Ashville. Both cars were badly damaged.

tinuous report on all political contributions.

The committee reached no formal conclusion on the case. But it did hear a useful Coffee promise that "I'll never accept another (contribution) of that character."

One Army officer wrote the committee to dispute statements that shell failures occurred only in Winter and that "only a couple of thousand shells" were defective.

"I commanded a CWS depot and I know that in the Summer (July) of 1944, in Normandy, deaths were caused by defective shells and that shipments of these defective shells were still being received from the United States up to May and June of 1945, at the port of Ghent, Belgium," he wrote.

"During this time, at least fifty (50) defective lot numbers were impounded... and until V-J day, over 500,000 shells were being reworked to correct the defects in them, so that they could be re-shipped to the Pacific theater."

"On numerous occasions, we were unable to make any shipments to the front, because of all stock, upwards of 100,000 shells, were all impounded."

Another soldier wrote the committee that it should be able to learn the names of manufacturers of the defective shells that killed American troops in the Battle of the Bulge by securing battalion orders issued at the time.

"Many of our men were killed and wounded as a result of this defective ammunition," he wrote. "The casualties were so high and the morale of the men so low (the shells were blowing up in the barrels of the guns), that whole lot numbers of shells were put on lists."

Mead said finding out why 4.2 mortar shells killed and injured American troops is "high on the committee's priority for future investigations."

The questionnaires being sent out request detailed information concerning incidents with which the officers and men are acquainted.

32 HEIRS NAMED DEFENDANTS IN WILL PETITION

Thirty two heirs listed in the will of V. H. Prushing, prominent farmer near Ashville whose estate has been appraised at $22,460.23 are named defendants in a suit filed Wednesday in Pickaway county common pleas court by Audran B. Lane, a nephew.

Contesting the validity of the will, which was admitted to probate June 14, 1946, Lane contends that the document, which does not list him among the heirs, is not the last will of Mr. Prushing.

The appraisal values the real estate at $18,770 and the personal property $3,690.23.

In the petition Lane says he is the son of Mrs. Sidna Lane, who was a sister of Mrs. Adda Prushing, the wife of V. H. Prushing, that Mrs. Adda Prushing died intestate June 6, 1944, with her husband as her sole heir, and that Mr. Prushing died May 24, 1946 leaving a "purported" will and that Fred Prushing and Harry Margulis, both of Ashville, were named executors of the estate.

The defendants named in the petition are: Elizabeth Beavers, Gladys B. Richey, both of Orient; Fred D. Prushing, Edward L. Prushing, Howard Barth, Harry Margulis, Florence Cline, all of Ashville; Reba Hinton, Route 1, Lockbourne; Fred Prushing, Jr., Route 2, Ashville; Hattie Hedges, Orient, RFD; Kermit Braskett, Ashville, RFD; William Prushing, Canal Winchester; Dr. Harry Prushing, Clarence E. U. S. SHIP SINKS

LONDON, Aug. 1.—Lloyds of London announced today that the 8,000-ton freighter American Farmer has sunk in the Atlantic 400 miles west of the English channel after a collision. Reports said passengers and crew escaped.

"While the United Nations must take responsibility for its success or failure to fulfill its functions as laid down by the charter, it cannot properly be held responsible for inability to achieve goals which by the terms of the charter may not be within its reach."

mill level east of the Rockies. Prices would be even higher west of the Rockies because of additional freight costs.

Meanwhile, the new decontrol board announced it will begin hearings Aug. 12 to determine whether to restore price ceilings on livestock, dairy products, grain, cottonseed and soy beans. After Aug. 20, it must decide whether eggs, poultry, petroleum, and tobacco are to be recontrolled.

Board Chairman Roy L. Thompson said the board's recontrol decisions will be based on whether prices have risen reasonably, whether items are in short supply, and whether it would be in the public interest to restore controls.

VANDALS WRECK INTERIOR OF LEGION HOME HERE

Police Chief William F. McCrady said that no robbery occurred but that the intruders tore draperies and rugs, smashed furniture and vases, and "generally wrecked" the Legion quarters.

Chief McCrady said that a search was made for fingerprints and in this effort police were assisted by a fingerprint expert from the Columbus post of the State Highway Patrol. It was undiscovered whether such prints were obtained. Means of access to the quarters was undetermined, police said, but two large front windows were left open when the vandals departed. There was no indication that robbery was the motive for the depredations, and Chief McCrady said it "appeared to be pure vandalism." He said the place was entered sometime after midnight Wednesday.

Nash-Kelvinator Corp. also refused Reuther's bid to the union-industry conference but officials indicated they would be willing to meet with the union chief privately.

General Motors and Chrysler have remained silent on the invitation. Only Kaiser-Frazer Corp., Willys-Overland Motors and Studebaker have accepted the bid.

FIRE DESTROYS 2 LARGE BARN

efforts to save the barn and contents were futile.

Large barn owned by Wayne Armstrong at Laurelville was burned to the ground after lightning hit the structure at 3:30 p. m. Wednesday. A small quantity of hay in the barn, along with a hay loader and a grain drill were consumed by the flames which were battled by Laurelville firemen aided by neighbors who were able to remove livestock from the blazing barn.

Although the loss was not definitely estimated it amounted to several thousand dollars.

DRIVERS INJURED WHEN THEIR AUTOS COLLIDE

Minor injuries were suffered by Mrs. Florence Forquer, 21, Ashville, and Dennis Winner, 48, Route 2, Ashville, according to State Highway Patrolman L. G. Ridenour, when their automobiles collided at 8:30 a. m. Thursday at the intersection of State Route 752 and the Shook road, at the north edge of Ashville.

Patrolman Ridenour said Mrs. Forquer was driving north on the Shook road, and Winner was proceeding west on State Route 752. Both drivers sustained cuts and bruises, Patrolman Ridenour said, and they were removed to their homes after receiving treatment in the office of Dr. R. S. Hosler at Ashville. Both cars were badly damaged.

CONGRESS MAY TIGHTEN LAWS ON 'DONATIONS'

tinuous report on all political contributions.

The committee reached no formal conclusion on the case.

But it did hear a rueful Coffee promise that "I'll never accept another (contribution) of that character."

One Army officer wrote the committee to dispute statements that shell failures occurred only in Winter and that "only a couple of thousand shells" were defective.

"I commanded a CWS depot and I know that in the Summer (July) of 1944, in Normandy, deaths were caused by defective shells and that shipments of these defective shells were still being received from the United States up to May and June of 1945, at the port of Ghent, Belgium," he wrote.

"During this time, at least fifty (50) defective lot numbers were impounded... and until V-J day, over 500,000 shells were being reworked to correct the defects in them, so that they could be re-shipped to the Pacific theater.

"On numerous occasions, we were unable to make any shipments to the front, because of all stock, upwards of 100,000 shells, were all impounded."

Another soldier wrote the committee that it should be able to learn the names of manufacturers of the defective shells that killed American troops in the Battle of the Bulge by securing battalion orders issued at the time.

"Many of our men were killed and wounded as a result of this defective ammunition," he wrote. "The casualties were so high and the morale of the men so low (the shells were blowing up in the barrels of the guns), that whole lot numbers of shells were put on lists."

Mead said finding out why 4.2 mortar shells killed and injured American troops is "high on the committee's priority for future investigations."

The questionnaires being sent out request detailed information concerning incidents with which the officers and men are acquainted.

HEFFNER ESTATE SALE ATTENDED BY BIG CROWD

Crowd estimated at more than 4,000 attended the public auction sale of chattels, belonging to the estate of Charles C. Heffner, Wednesday, at the Heffner home in Walnut township, four and one-half miles northeast of Circleville. It was reported to be one of the biggest sales ever held here.

The sale, which began at 10 a. m. and continued until dusk with Orrin Updyke and Walter Bumgarner as auctioneers, was ordered by Ray E. Heffner and Floyd W. Hook, as executors of the estate. Noon lunch was served by the women of the Hedges Chapel church.

32 HEIRS NAMED DEFENDANTS IN WILL PETITION

Thirty-two heirs listed in the will of V. H. Prushing, prominent farmer near Ashville whose estate has been appraised at $22,460.23 are named defendants in a suit filed Wednesday in Pickaway county common pleas court by Audran B. Lane, a nephew.

Contesting the validity of the will, which was admitted to probate June 14, 1946, Lane contends that the document, which does not list him among the heirs, is not the last will of Mr. Prushing.

The appraisal values the real estate at $13,770 and the personal property $8,690.23.

In the petition Lane says he is the son of Mrs. Sidna Lane, who was a sister of Mrs. Adda Prushing, the wife of V. H. Prushing, that Mrs. Adda Prushing died intestate June 6, 1944, with her husband as her sole heir, and that Mr. Prushing died May 24, 1946 leaving a "purported" will and that Fred Prushing and Harry Margulis, both of Ashville, were named executors of the estate.

The defendants named in the petition are: Elizabeth Beavers, Gladys B. Richey, both of Orient; Fred D. Prushing, Edward L. Prushing, Howard Barth, Harry Margulis, Florence Cline, all of Ashville; Reba Hinton, Route 1, Lockbourne; Fred Prushing, Jr., Route 2, Ashville; Hattie Hedges, Orient, RFD; Kermit Brasket, Ashville, RFD; William Prushing, Canal Winchester; Dr. Harry Prushing, Clarence E. Barth, Gladys Barth, David D. Barth, Robert Prushing, Mildred Hoelscher, Lucille Mittoff, Meda Schooley, Elsie Lane Knox, and Harry Brown, all of Columbus; David T. Prushing, Byron Prushing, and Dean Prushing, all of Gahanna; Orville I. Lane, Delaware; Bower Prushing, Orient, RFD; Claude Prushing, Worthington; Paul Prushing, and Helen Deerson, both of Lockbourne, RFD; Ray Prushing, Canal Winchester, RFD; and Minnie Parker, Hilliards.

is now free under $50,000 bond on a draft evasion charge, came to Columbus in October, 1943, to inspect his draft file, which was transferred here from New York after he was made financial adviser to the president of the Taylorcraft firm.

Colonel Goble said that John H. Weiner, an investigator for the house military affairs committee, had come to Ohio selective service headquarters and demanded to know why Rubinstein's name was taken off a list of employees for whom deferment had been requested by the Taylorcraft Company.

The draft officials said his occupational advisers told him Rubinstein's connection with the Alliance company was purely financial and that his "skill" was not essential to the company.

FARM SAFETY BRINGS LOWER INSURANCE RATE

Steady Drop In Costs Seen As Accidents Become Fewer In Ohio

Farmers employing three or more persons are required to carry workmen's compensation insurance, according to Harry M. Pontious, Ohio Farm Bureau safety director. Despite increases in other types of accidents, a reduction in accidents involving farm hands has been reflected in the steady drop of the insurance rate, Pontious said.

Another reduction of approximately 28 per cent has been made in the rate of workmen's compensation insurance on farm employees, according to a report just issued by the Ohio Safety Industrial Commission. The rate was made effective from July 1, 1939 the rate was $4.50 per $100 wages. Today, with the new reduction, the rate stands at $2 per $100 wages.

Effective work of the Farm and Home Accident Prevention Committee, organized in 1939 by Harry L. Sane, superintendent of the Department of Safety and Hygiene, Ohio Safety Industrial Commission; H. C. Ramsower, director of Agricultural Extension, Ohio State University; and Pontious, now chairman of the committee, was given as the major reason for fewer accidents and rate reductions over the six-year period.

From the $4.50 rate for workmen's compensation insurance on farm employees in 1939, reductions were made as follows: 1940, $4; 1941, $3.50; 1942-43, $3; 1944-45, $2.80; and 1946, $2.

"Agricultural leaders of farm organizations and agencies in Ohio who have been actively participating in the work of the committee welcome the reduction," Pontious said. "Farmers are discovering that the safety program started years ago is paying off in dollars and cents saved Ohio farmers."

Farmers employing less than three workers may carry the insurance which affords protection against any legal liability for oc-

ANDERSON SAYS COFFEE ASKED FOR $2,500 PAY

Contractor With Accent Can
See No Wrong In Paying
Congressman For Job

BY FREDERICK C. OTHMAN
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—The scene in the senate caucus chamber was like a bad dream. Such things could not happen and yet there was a man with a Scandinavian accent as thick as his eyeglasses shouting under oath into the microphone about how he'd hired a congressman to function as his personal lobbyist.

The man was Eivind Anderson, who said "yon" and "yump" and told, by yimminy, about his troubles building a hospital for the war department near Tacoma, Wash.

The congressman was Rep. John M. Coffee of Washington, who wore a peeled-onion haircut and who sat not six feet from his self-confessed employer.

The details of how Anderson wrote a $2,500 check to Paul Olson, the congressman's secretary, you will find elsewhere. You also will note the congressman's contention that the $2,500 was a mere political campaign contribution.

The flabbergasting thing was that Anderson, the man who signed a $1,000,000 building contract with the war department, felt that he had done no wrong making a deal in the bowels of the capitol building to hire the Messrs. Coffee and Olson. He insisted he hired 'em. He said they were Democrats. He said when he handed out campaign contributions he gave them only to Republicans.

"But didn't you know that you had violated the criminal laws of this nation?" demanded Sen. Tom Connally of Texas, who sat with the senate war investigating committee.

Anderson said he knew no such thing. He said he needed a man to look after his interests in Washington, that he'd paid Rep. Coffee, and that he did not believe he'd received his money's worth. "Although," he said, "I suppose I got about all I could expect from a congressman."

Sen. Connally looked at him in wonder. "And you didn't know you could be indicted," the senator mused. "In my opinion, you should be."

Anderson couldn't see how the senator got such an idea. He'd paid his money to get a job done, he said, and if the congressman hadn't worked as hard as he should have, was that his fault?

He went into detail about his luncheon with Rep. Coffee and Secretary Olson in the house restaurant and told how his hosts led him into a long, dark corridor beneath the capitol, stopped him at a circular iron stairway, and said that for $2,500 they'd undertake to handle his business with the war department.

More questioning by Sen. Homer F. Ferguson brought from Anderson the statement that Rep. Coffee, himself, asked him for the money.

"So I said, 'All right, yon, I'll send the money to Paul,'" Anderson testified. That ended the smiles in the caucus room. The senators stared at Rep. Coffee. The con-

LONDON PRISON HERD INSPECTED AND CLASSIFIED

BRATTLEBORO, Vt., Aug. 1—London Prison Farm, London, has recently had its herd inspected and classified for type. The Holstein-Friesian Association of America announces today. The inspection was conducted by Clair I. Miller, Medina, Ohio, one of the eight officials appointed by the Association to do this work in the United States.

Among the animals classified in this herd, 5 were designated "good plus"—the third highest score an animal can receive.

This is the third time this herd has been classified for type. The type classification, combined with a production testing program, is used as a means of proving sires and locating outstanding brood cow families in an owner's herd.

OHIOAN NAMED RECRUIT CHIEF

Lt. Col. Dayton Commanding
Officer For Ohio Army
Recruiting District

A native Ohioan, Lt. Col. William R. Dayton, has been named commanding officer for the Ohio recruiting sub-district, and as such is responsible for the Regular Army recruiting program in the state of Ohio, with headquarters in Cleveland. Col. Dayton was born in Cambridge, graduated from high school in Newcomerstown in 1920 and received his degree at Wittenberg college, Springfield, in 1925.

Col. Dayton's military service began in November 1932 when he enlisted in the Ohio National Guard. He was a member of the 166th Infantry, then a part of the 37th Division. He was called to active duty in 1941 and was sent overseas with a Task Force to the Netherlands East Indies in February 1942. It was the responsibility of this Task Force to protect the Royal Dutch Oil Refinery and its extensive installations there. Col. Dayton was Commanding Officer of mobile troops and executive officer of the Task Force. After 21 months service he was transferred to Trinidad, British West Indies, where he was Executive Officer of the 33rd Infantry.

Returning to the United States in February 1944, Col. Dayton served as battalion commander at Camp Fannin, Tex., and Camp Livingston La., before being named Commanding Officer of the Charleston, W. Va., Recruiting District in September 1945. While Col. Dayton was at Charleston the West Virginia District accomplished 98.6 percent of its overall quota of enlistments.

LAUSCHE HINTS SESSION ON OLD AGE PENSIONS

COLUMBUS, Aug. 1—Final action by the federal government on pending legislation to increase old age pensions will result in another special session of the state legislature, Gov. Frank J. Lausche indicated today.

The governor has said that if the federal government increased its payments to old age pensioners, the state law would have to be changed to match the payments. Gov. Lausche also indicated that final approval of pending federal legislation for federal hospital funds would result in his requesting the state board of control to release funds for a survey of Ohio's hospital needs.

The board recently refused to make $22,000 available for this purpose because congress had not enacted the federal aid bill.

Although the federal hospital bill carries no appropriation for this year, the governor said "the hospital survey should be made so Ohio will be ready with an over-all plan when federal aid money becomes available."

ANDERSON SAYS COFFEE ASKED FOR $2,500 PAY

Contractor With Accent Can
See No Wrong In Paying
Congressman For Job

BY FREDERICK C. OTHMAN
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—The scene in the senate caucus chamber was like a bad dream. Such things could not happen and yet there was a man with a Scandinavian accent as thick as his eyeglasses shouting into a microphone about how he'd hired a congressman to function as his personal lobbyist.

The man was Eivind Anderson, who said "yon" and "yump" and told, by yimminy, about his troubles building a hospital for the war department near Tacoma, Wash.

The congressman was Rep. John M. Coffee of Washington, who wore a peeled-onion haircut and who sat not six feet from his self-confessed employer.

The details of how Anderson wrote a $2,500 check to Paul Olson, the congressman's secretary, you will find elsewhere. You also will note the congressman's contention that the $2,500 was a mere political campaign contribution.

The flabbergasting thing was that Anderson, the man who signed a $1,000,000 building contract with the war department, felt that he had done no wrong making a deal in the bowels of the capitol building to hire the Messrs. Coffee and Olson. He insisted he hired 'em. He said they were Democrats. He said when he handed out campaign contributions he gave them only to Republicans.

"But didn't you know that you had violated the criminal laws of this nation?" demanded Sen. Tom Connally of Texas, who sat with the senate war investigating committee.

Anderson said he knew no such thing. He said he needed a man to look after his interests in Washington, that he'd paid Rep. Coffee, and that he did not believe he'd received his money's worth.

"Although," he said, "I suppose I got about all I could expect from a congressman."

Sen. Connally looked at him in wonder.

"And you didn't know you could be indicted," the senator mused. "In my opinion, you should be."

Anderson couldn't see how the senator got such an idea. He'd paid his money to get a job done, he said, and if the congressman hadn't worked as hard as he should have, was that his fault?

He went into detail about his luncheon with Rep. Coffee and Secretary Olson in the house restaurant and told how his hosts led him into a long, dark corridor beneath the capitol, stopped him at a circular iron stairway, and said that for $2,500 they'd undertake to handle his business with the war department.

More questioning by Sen. Homer F. Ferguson brought from Anderson the statement that Rep. Coffee, himself, asked him for the money.

"So I said, 'All right, yon, I'll send the money to Paul,'" Anderson testified. That ended the smiles in the caucus room. The senators stared at Rep. Coffee. The con-

HELICOPTER HOP

SPEED of transportation is not so simple as the fastest rate of the fastest vehicle used. For the ordinary traveler it includes some nuisance transportation which eats up extra time.

A practical test was conducted recently by the United Aircraft Corporation between Sikorsky helicopter plant in Bridgeport, Conn., and United Aircraft's headquarters in Hartford. A helicopter left directly. A group of executives went by auto to the airport, and by Lockheed Lodestar to Hartford. One official drove to the railway station and took the train. Another group went all the way by auto.

The helicopter came in first, and the train rider last. Primary factor in slowing down his trip was the driving to and from the station at both ends. This also continues to be the chief drawback to short distance flying, particularly between big cities which have airports nearly an hour's drive from the downtown sections.

Perhaps the fastest travel would be achieved by airlines providing a helicopter shuttle service between airport and city.

PRECEDENT FOR BOWLES

CHESTER Bowles' unpopularity with the Senate is said to be one reason why the OPA nearly collapsed. This would make a piquant situation if Bowles followed the urgings of his friends and got himself elected to the Senate from Connecticut.

President Andrew Johnson would have appreciated that situation. Johnson, trying to carry out Lincoln's policy of reconciliation with the South after the Civil War, got into a bitter fight with Congress, which wanted to punish the Southerners severely. Finally Johnson was tried by the Senate for high crimes and misdemeanors, and acquitted by one vote, the necessary two-thirds having fallen short by that amount.

Seven years later Johnson was elected Senator from Tennessee, and as such moved on terms of equality with many who had tried to expel him from the presidency. He lived to enjoy his triumph a little less than five months, but it was a triumph while it lasted.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACK GAVEN

NEW YORK, August 1—New York is the biggest yokel town in the country. That's Jules Pfeiffer's opinion and he has an income of several thousand dollars weekly and the worst play ever to back it up.

Jules likes to stand at the bar in a small hotel in West Forty-Fourth street—he calls it his office—and look through the bottom of a glass at the suckers traipsing up to the box office of the Belasco theater across the way to buy tickets for "Maid in the Ozarks." Occasionally he'll venture out into the heat to check up at the box office and then return to his air-conditioned foot-rail to marvel aloud at his Ozark Mountain gold mine.

"Did $12,000 our first week," he said. "Got $13,000 the second week. We'll get $16,000 this week. Can you imagine a turkey like that?"

In connection with these figures, it should be explained that Pfeiffer's over-all expenses run around $2,500 weekly. It's one of those blue moon mints that makes hope spring eternal in the breast of theater investors. Add to this the fact that he acquired the whole works for $1,000 and that he is in his third year with it.

"Maid In The Ozarks" is all the hill-billy corn you ever heard in song and story rolled into three acts. There is a leer in every other line, two city girls running around in shorts and a filly of the hills cavorting in a slight excuse for a skirt and shirtwaist that is cut almost as low as the bodice of Joyce Redman when she was playing Doll Tearsheet with the old Vic company last month.

Pfeiffer is a shrewd, 30-year-old character from Chicago who has no illusions about art in the theater. After looking around, he isn't too impressed with some of the prominent producers of the day.

"That's the trouble with the stage," he said. "They're still producing for the cream in the bottle—for the carriage trade. There just isn't enough of it to keep the theater going. I want to reduce entertainment to the simple things. They come and laugh don't they?"

The secret of Pfeiffer's success is exploitation. He spends more on advertising than is spent on any 10 other shows. They're eye-catching ads, too, and he pokes fun at the play, himself, the customers and the critics.

"I was in New York before I decided to bring the play here from Atlantic City and I saw some of those prices the movie houses were getting," he said. "A dollar-eighty for stuff that I'd been seeing in other cities for 50 cents. I decided then that New Yorkers were the biggest yokels of all and that my show had a chance here."

Pfeiffer has shown the play almost everywhere he could get a house for it. Some of the theaters were off the beaten path, such as the time it stayed for a week in the red light district of Canton, O., the only section where he could find an auditorium. He netted $59,000 in nine weeks in Detroit.

Pfeiffer took over the play in Chicago when it was losing money and quickly hyped it into the chips. Previously it had had a long career on the west coast where the author, Claire Parrish, had seen her seriously intended work turned into a mess of hokum.

Next Wednesday Broadway is going to get something new—a "Milkman's Matinee" of the play which will start at 11 a. m.

"They must be discussing the railroad business. I just heard someone yell 'boxcars'!"

DIET AND HEALTH

Intervertebral Disk Protrusion

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

PAIN in the lower part of the back and down the back of the leg are symptoms familiar to every doctor. Formerly, physicians were inclined to assign to this very common affliction a common cause, inflammation of one or other of the structures in the region of the spine, nerves, muscles, joints or ligaments.

Standard treatment for inflammation, rest and the application of heat, brought about recovery in mild cases but, unfortunately, severe cases did not improve under this treatment.

Recently, according to Dr. John E. A. O'Connell of England, evidence has been found which points to another and very different cause for many cases of low back pain and sciatica.

Disk Protrusion

Both of these, he believes, may be due to what is known as protrusion of an intervertebral disk. This simply means that one of the little disks or cushions of cartilage between the bones of the spine has come out of place.

In order to make a diagnosis of protrusion of an intervertebral disk, an X-ray of the spine is essential. In the X-ray, if one of the disks is out of place, the space between the bones will be narrowed. Furthermore, there may be some overgrowth of the bone.

Dr. O'Connell believes that, by careful examination, it is possible to make a diagnosis and, even to determine exactly which area of the spine is affected. This is done by noting the location of the pain and the location of other symptoms such as numbness and tingling. The lower part of the spine is known as the sacrum. Just above the sacrum are the lumbar vertebrae.

Where Protrusion Is

If the disk which has protruded is between the last of the lumbar vertebrae and the first sacral vertebra, there will be pain in the sole and outer edge of the foot. There may be some disturbance of sensation in the sole of the foot.

There will be some bending of the lower part of spine to one or the other side. There will also be some difficulty in bending forward with less trouble in bending backward.

The treatment of this type of condition will depend on its severity. If the pain is quite intense, or if there is a great deal of disability, operation is usually necessary. In milder cases, complete rest for a time together with the wearing of a supporting cast or brace may bring relief.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

FLO WAS changing for dinner when Anna came to the door. "I forgot to tell you, Mrs. Cooley. . . Mr. Cooley telephoned, too. He said that he won't be home for dinner."

There was a smug satisfaction on the woman's face and her eyes were accusing. Flo looked away from them. "Did Mr. Cooley say where he was having dinner?"

"No. Just that he wouldn't be home." Anna smiled and walked away from the door.

But Flo's fury at her was crowded instantly out of her mind by the startling fact of Doug's dining out. Retaliation, because she had not come home last night. But that wasn't the way Doug reacted—there were those many other times she had not come home which he had let go unnoticed.

This was the first evening he had left her alone in the four years of their marriage. When a dinner engagement had not included women he had made certain before he went to it that she had something to do. But tonight he hadn't thought of her. . . Perhaps he had tired of the anomalous situation between them. Even Doug wouldn't take it too long.

She ate her dinner from a tray, on the terrace. She would tell Doug the truth, tonight. About Dan. . . "I cheated you horribly. . . Doug might forgive her—later. . . But she owed it to him, to tell him. She was still on the terrace when Doug came in, an hour later. He came to the door. "Hello! You're home!"

"Yes. I was too comfortable here to move. . . Anyway, I'd just come in when Anna gave me your message. I had tea—coffee, rather, with this writer who's doing a story about my mother."

She stopped, struck by the realization that it was the first time she ever voluntarily had told Doug anything of what she had been doing. Doug came out on the porch. "A beautiful evening," he observed. Before this his comments on the weather always had irritated her. But now she said, "Yes, isn't it?"

Doug took up a pipe from a table, looked down into the bowl of it as he filled it. "I had dinner tonight with Senator Corcoran. . . He left on the 9 o'clock for Washington."

She scarcely heard him. She was thinking of what she had to tell him. She locked her fingers together. "Doug. . ."

Doug struck a match for his pipe. "He's asked me to go to Peru with that Congressional Commission."

Flo unlocked her fingers. "Peru? And you're going?"

Doug sat down on the arm of a chair. "Yes, I think I will. I didn't give Corcoran a definite answer tonight, but I've just about decided to go. There's nothing in the office that Willis can't take care of and it will be an interesting experience. I'm rather flattered that I've been picked to go!"

"It is an honor, of course," agreed Flo, in a quietly empty voice. "When do you go?"

"Next week. Corcoran wants the four of us—two New York lawyers and Kingsley, from the Attorney General's office, to go ahead of the others to arrange the legal procedure. It's rather short notice, but I think I can be ready. We'll fly from Miami."

Doug was fondling the bowl of his pipe as he spoke. Flo had seen him do that hundreds of times, but she found herself watching his hands with the strained certainty that the next minute they would do something startlingly different.

"I can't say how long I'll be away. And while I'm down there I'd like to see Buenos Aires and Rio. You doubtless have your own plans for this summer—I'll put a thousand dollars more in your checking account. That ought to cover whatever you decide to do. If anything out of the ordinary comes up—go to Willis." He put his pipe back in his mouth. "I think I'll turn in. . . I've had a very busy day."

As he moved toward the door he paused at the side of her chair, but all he said was, "Good night, my dear." Then he went on into the house.

Left alone, Flo sprang unsteadily to her feet, her hand holding to her chair for its support. "I didn't tell him—he told me!"

"Oh, good!" cried Charlie from halfway up the stairs.

She went into her own room, stood still in the middle of it, to feel the joy of its familiarity. Her eyes moved hungrily from one possession to another. It was exactly like those homecomings from school, this excitement of finding everything as she had left it.

She heard her mother and ran into the hall and down the stairs. "Mother!"

Surprise and pleasure brought a glow to Mary Patten's face as she lifted it to Charlie. "Darling! I didn't know. . ."

Charlie kissed her, hugged her. "I didn't myself! Trent telephoned he couldn't get home for dinner and I took a taxi straight here."

Trent, Mary Patten's smile stiffened a very little. "I'm glad you came, dear. I'll go up and change into something cooler and be with you in a few minutes."

Charlie watched her go up the stairs, saw her step slower, a slight droop to her shoulders.

She said to Nettie, when Nettie came into the study to set another place at the small table, "Mother looks bushed—is she working awfully hard?"

"She's got worries, I guess! But 'taint work. . ." She stalked out of the room then, throwing Charlie a meaningful look from the door.

THE RATHER critical state of current affairs is destined to a complete overturn from the perilous to the stable, profitable and enduring.

This is by a decisive marshalling of the forces, a pause for a shrewd analysis of the situation, with a resultant wise and constructive decision to go ahead in tried and tested lines, with logic, reason and sound principles as base for actions.

These should be put forth with vigor, initiative and determination, sustained by diligence, astute moves and an eye to enduring values.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves keyed to a sound and surging degree of energy, initiative and high purpose, aimed at putting hazardous or shaky predicaments on a sound and even keel, for future security and comfort.

Such basic achievements depend upon a concentration of all available resources, forces and faculties, shrewdly analyzed and directed, with unflinching attack, diligence and purpose, sustained by wise decisions, firmness, with practical and constructive techniques.

This sagacious and determined effort promises rich rewards and personal gratifications of far-reaching import in private as well as business connections.

A child born on this day possesses much practical ability and energy with good judgment, diligence and sound purpose, for success and lasting returns.

EVERY ALERT declarer knows that a skillful defender is trying to read his mind and figure out what he is trying to do. Taking advantage of that, the declarer can sometimes make his adversary believe he is embarking on a particular plan to make his contract, whereas he actually is on his way to doing something utterly different. But causing the defender to believe a certain procedure is under way, the declarer may thereby lure his prey into taking standard measures to thwart that plan, thereby playing right into disaster.

North had shown enough general strength to overcall when vulnerable, so perhaps his double was based mainly on his high card strength, in which event South might have the heart Q doubly guarded.

Since West's first play in trumps would cast the die, and disastrously if he guessed wrong, he looked for a way to eliminate the necessity for guessing. He found it, in devising a simple way to make the defense guess for him first, possibly wrongly. It was by creating the appearance that he was planning to ruff out some diamond losers, which might have the effect of causing a defender to lead trumps.

Tough Luck, Tourists!
Alcan Highway Closed

Facilities Too Slight
For Expected Traffic

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—If pictures of the beauties of the north have set your mind on taking a trip over the war-built Alaska highway, forget it! The scenery is waiting, but the road is not willing. Although current repair and extension is being pushed as rapidly as possible, it is not expected that it can be used extensively by tourists before the summer of 1947. Secretary of the Interior J. A. Krug was informed of this official status of the road by Director Edwin G. Arnold, of the department's division of territories and island possessions.

There already is some travel over the Alaska highway through Canada and Alaska, but the road is not open to tourist travel in general because of the lack of facilities such as filling stations, repair shops and eating and sleeping accommodations, Arnold said. It is expected that the route will be ready for increasing tourist travel in 1947.

Alaska is an ideal vacation land. Only lack of adequate transportation prevents it from being more fully exploited. From a tourist viewpoint, the country offers every delight.

The highway winds through forests and cuts through scenic mountain ranges. Both the United States and Canada have set aside a strip of land on each side of the route for the control of its development.

The Alcan, as the road was then known, was started in 1942 by Army engineers, who smashed ahead with a pioneer road. They were followed by contractors of the Public Roads Administration who widened and paved it.

HELICOPTER HOP

SPEED of transportation is not so simple as the fastest rate of the fastest vehicle used. For the ordinary traveller it includes some nuisance transportation which eats up extra time.

A practical test was conducted recently by the United Aircraft Corporation between Sikorsky helicopter plant in Bridgeport, Conn., and United Aircraft's headquarters in Hartford. A helicopter left directly. A group of executives went by auto to the airport, and by Lockheed Lodestar to Hartford. One official drove to the railway station and took the train. Another group went all the way by auto.

The helicopter came in first, and the train rider last. Primary factor in slowing down his trip was the driving to and from the station at both ends. This also continues to be the chief drawback to short distance flying, particularly between big cities which have airports nearly an hour's drive from the downtown sections.

Perhaps the fastest travel would be achieved by airlines providing a helicopter shuttle service between airport and city.

PRECEDENT FOR BOWLES

CHESTER Bowles' unpopularity with the Senate is said to be one reason why the OPA nearly collapsed. This would make a piquant situation if Bowles followed the urgings of his friends and got himself elected to the Senate from Connecticut.

President Andrew Johnson would have appreciated that situation. Johnson, trying to carry out Lincoln's policy of reconciliation with the South after the Civil War, got into a bitter fight with Congress, which wanted to punish the Southerners severely. Finally Johnson was tried by the Senate for high crimes and misdemeanors, and acquitted by one vote, the necessary two-thirds having fallen short by that amount.

Seven years later Johnson was elected Senator from Tennessee, and as such moved on terms of equality with many who had tried to expel him from the presidency. He lived to enjoy his triumph a little less than five months, but it was a triumph while it lasted.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACE GAVEN

NEW YORK, August 1—New York is the biggest yokel town in the country. That's Jules Pfeiffer's opinion and he has an income of several thousand dollars weekly and the worst play ever to back it up.

Jules likes to stand at the bar in a small hotel in West Forty-Fourth street—he calls it his office—and look through the bottom of a glass at the suckers traipsing up to the box office of the Belasco theater across the way to buy tickets for "Maid in the Ozarks." Occasionally he'll venture out into the heat to check up at the box office and then return to his air-conditioned foot-rail to marvel aloud at his Ozark Mountain gold mine.

"Did $12,000 our first week," he said. "Got $13,000 the second week. We'll get $16,000 this week. Can you imagine a turkey like that?"

In connection with these figures, it should be explained that Pfeiffer's over-all expenses run around $2,500 weekly. It's one of those blue moon mints that makes hope spring eternal in the breast of theater investors. Add to this the fact that he acquired the whole works for $1,000 and that he is in his third year with it.

"Maid in the Ozarks" is all the hill-billy corn you ever heard in song and story rolled into three acts. There is a leer in every other line, two city girls running around in shorts and a filly of the hills cavorting in a slight excuse for a skirt and shirtwaist that is cut almost as low as the bodice of Joyce Redman when she was playing Doll Tearsheet with the old Vic company last month.

Pfeiffer is a shrewd, 30-year-old character from Chicago who has no illusions about art in the theater. After looking around, he isn't too impressed with some of the prominent producers of the day.

"That's the trouble with the stage," he said. "They're still producing for the cream in the bottle—for the carriage trade. There just isn't enough of it to keep the theater going. I want to reduce entertainment to the simple things. They come and laugh don't they?"

The secret of Pfeiffer's success is exploitation. He spends more on advertising than is spent on any 10 other shows. They're eye-catching ads, too, and he pokes fun at the play, himself, the customers and the critics.

"I was in New York before I decided to bring the play here from Atlantic City and I saw some of those prices the movie houses were getting," he said. "A dollar-eighty for stuff that I'd been seeing in other cities for 50 cents. I decided then that New Yorkers were the biggest yokels of all and that my show had a chance here."

Pfeiffer has shown the play almost everywhere he could get a house for it. Some of the theaters were off the beaten path, such as the time it stayed for a week in the red light district of Canton, O., the only section where he could find an auditorium. He netted $59,000 in nine weeks in Detroit.

Pfeiffer took over the play in Chicago when it was losing money and quickly hyped it into the chips. Previously it had had a long career on the west coast where the author, Claire Parrish, had seen her seriously intended work turned into a mess of hokum.

Next Wednesday Broadway is going to get something new—a "Milkman's Matinee" of the play which will start at 11 a. m.

Intervertebral Disk Protrusion

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

PAIN in the lower part of the back and down the back of the leg are symptoms familiar to every doctor. Formerly, physicians were inclined to assign to this very common affliction a common cause, inflammation of one or other of the structures in the region of the spine, nerves, muscles, joints or ligaments.

Standard treatment for inflammation, rest and the application of heat, brought about recovery in mild cases but, unfortunately, severe cases did not improve under this treatment.

Recently, according to Dr. John E. A. O'Connell of England, evidence has been found which points to another and very different cause for many cases of low back pain and sciatica.

Disk Protrusion

Both of these, he believes, may be due to what is known as protrusion of an intervertebral disk. This simply means that one of the little disks or cushions of cartilage between the bones of the spine has come out of place.

In order to make a diagnosis of protrusion of an intervertebral disk, an X-ray of the spine is essential. In the X-ray, if one of the disks is out of place, the space between the bones will be narrowed. Furthermore, there may be some overgrowth of the bone.

Dr. O'Connell believes that, by careful examination, it is possible to make a diagnosis and, even, to determine exactly which area of the spine is affected. This is done by noting the location of the pain and the location of other symptoms such as numbness and tingling. The lower part of the spine is known as the sacrum. Just above the sacrum are the lumbar vertebrae.

Where Protrusion Is

If the disk which has protruded is between the last of the lumbar vertebrae and the first sacral vertebra, there will be pain in the sole and outer edge of the foot. There may be some disturbance of sensation in the sole of the foot.

There will be some bending of the lower part of spine to one or the other side. There will also be some difficulty in bending forward with less trouble in bending backward.

The treatment of this type of condition will depend on its severity. If the pain is quite intense, or if there is a great deal of disability, operation is usually necessary. In milder cases, complete rest for a time together with the wearing of a supporting cast or brace may bring relief.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

FLO WAS changing for dinner when Anne came to the door. "I forgot to tell you, Mrs. Cooley," Mr. Cooley telephoned, too. He said that he won't be home for dinner.

There was a smug satisfaction on the woman's face and her eyes were accusing. Flo looked away from them. "Did Mr. Cooley say where he was having dinner?"

"No. Just that he wouldn't be home." Anne smiled and walked away from the door.

But Flo's fury at her was crowded instantly out of her mind by the startling fact of Doug's dining out. Retaliation, because she had not come home last night. But that wasn't the way Doug reacted—there were those many other times she had not come home which he had let go unnoticed.

This was the first evening he had left her alone in the four years of their marriage. When a dinner engagement had not included women, he had made certain before he went to it that she had something to do. But tonight he hadn't thought of her. . . . Perhaps he had tired of the anomalous situation between them. Even Doug wouldn't take it too long.

She ate her dinner from a tray, on the terrace. She would tell Doug the truth, tonight. About Dan. "I cheated you horribly. . . . Doug might forgive her—he might not. But she owed it to him, to tell him. She was still on the terrace when Doug came in, an hour later. He came to the door. "Hello! You're home!"

"Yes. I was too comfortable here to move. . . . Anyway, I'd just come in when Anna gave me your message. I had tea—coffee, rather, with this writer who's doing a story about my mother."

She stopped, struck by the realization that it was the first time she ever voluntarily had told Doug anything of what she had been doing.

Doug came out on the porch. "A beautiful evening," he observed. Before this his comments on the weather always had irritated her. But now she said, "Yes, isn't it?"

Doug took up a pipe from a table, looked down into the bowl of it as he filled it. "I had dinner tonight with Senator Corcoran. . . . He left on the 9 o'clock for Washington."

She scarcely heard him. She was thinking of what she had to tell him. She looked her fingers together. "Doug. . . ."

Doug struck a match for his pipe. "He's asked me to go to Peru with that Congressional Commission."

Flo unlocked her fingers. "Peru? And you're going?"

Doug sat down on the arm of a chair. "Yes, I think I will. I didn't give Corcoran a definite answer to-night, but I've just about decided to go. There's nothing in the office that Willis can't take care of and it will be an interesting experience. I'm rather flattered that I've been picked to go!"

"It is an honor, of course," agreed Flo, in a quietly empty voice. "When do you go?"

"Next week. Corcoran wants the four of us—two New York lawyers and Kingsley, from the Attorney General's office, to go ahead of the others to arrange the legal procedure. It's rather short notice, but I think I can be ready. We'll fly from Miami."

Doug was fondling the bowl of his pipe as he spoke. Flo had seen him do that hundreds of times, but she found herself watching his hands with the strained certainty that the next minute they would do something startlingly different. "I can't say how long I'll be away. And while I'm down there I'd like to see Buenos Aires and Rio. You doubtless have your own plans for this summer—I'll put a thousand dollars more in your checking account. That ought to cover whatever you decide to do. If anything out of the ordinary comes up—go to Willis. He put his pipe back in his mouth. "I think I'll turn in. . . . I've had a very busy day."

As he moved toward the door he paused at the side of her chair, but all he said was, "Good night, my dear." Then he went on into the house.

Left alone, Flo sprang unsteadily to her feet, her hand holding to her chair for its support. "I didn't tell him—he told me!"

Your husband's on the phone, Mrs. Renner," shrieked Mrs. Riggs up the well of the stairway.

Charlie ran down the stairs past Mrs. Riggs without looking at her. "Hello, Trent!"

"I can't get home for supper. Charlie, there's a council meeting I want to listen in on, and I've some work here to finish. . . ."

"Oh, Trent!"

"Sorry, but it's important—why don't you go to the movies?"

Charlie bit her lips hard, answered, "Maybe I will."

"See you later. . . ."

She ran back up the stairs, closed her door, leaned against it.

A council meeting! Why did Trent have to go to that? And he wasn't really sorry he was leaving her to spend the evening alone. His voice had sounded eager and excited. It was the tone she had heard in it whenever he spoke of the work which was absorbing him, evenings.

She had asked, one evening, "What are you doing, Trent?"

At the moment he had appeared to be brooding over some clippings, other times it would be notes scribbled on yellow sheets of paper, or a report of some sort.

At her question he'd lifted his head, his eyes flashing. "Maybe not a darn thing, and maybe I'm getting kind of bored of something! I can't tell you about it now, sweet. . . ."

She had accepted the secrecy he gave it as characteristic of newspaper work. But now as she leaned against the door, tears slowly running down her cheeks, from each occasion sprang a grievance, to pile on this biggest one.

She did not try to fight it; it was a relief to give way to it and to indignation. "I won't stay here!" And she looked around the room, seeing it shabby and dull and makeshift. Except for her trip to the market she had been shut in it all day. It was a quarter of five. If she hurried she could get to the house before her mother came from the office. She ran to the mirror, dabbing at the tears on her cheeks as she did so.

She took a taxi, finding a perverse joy in the extravagance. She still had a key to the house and let herself in without ringing. She stood still just inside the door, drawing in the glad feeling of return.

Nettie appeared in the door. "Oh, it's you!"

Just as she had often greeted her when she came from school for a vacation. Affection in it, for all its shortness.

"I've come for dinner, Nettie. Have you enough? Is Mother going to be home?"

"Tonight she is. She's been eating out more'n she used to. Yes, there's enough." She added, "Raspberry cobbler!"

"Oh, good!" cried Charlie from halfway up the stairs.

She went into her own room, stood still in the middle of it, to feel the joy of its familiarity. Her eyes moved hungrily from one possession to another. It was exactly like those homecomings from school, this excitement of finding everything as she had left it.

She heard her mother and ran into the hall and down the stairs. "Mother!"

Surprise and pleasure brought a glow to Mary Patten's face as she lifted it to Charlie. "Darling! I didn't know. . . ."

Charlie kissed her, hugged her. "I didn't myself! Trent telephoned he couldn't get home for dinner and I took a taxi straight home."

Trent. Mary Patten's smile stiffened a very little. "I'm glad you came, dear. I'll go up and change into something cooler and be with you in a few minutes."

Charlie watched her go up the stairs, saw her step slower, a slight droop to her shoulders.

She said to Nettie, when Nettie came into the study to set another place at the small table, "Mother looks bushed—she is working awfully hard!"

"She's got worries, I guess! But 'taint work. . . ."

She stalked out, throwing Charlie a meaningful look from the door. (To Be Continued)

Rev. Reed Reads Ceremony At Williamsport

Miss Virginia Rose Puffinbarger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Puffinbarger, route 2, became the bride of Kenneth Lee Wright, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wright, Williamsport, Saturday evening at the Methodist church, Williamsport. The Rev. G. C. Reed, Mt. Sterling, performed the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore her sister's wedding gown of lustrous white satin styled with a sweetheart neck line on a fitted bodice with sleeves ending in ruffles over her hands. The marquisette skirt was full and terminated in a long sweeping train. Her fingertip veil of illusion fell from a halo of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of white gardenias centered with an orchid and tied with white net.

Mrs. Paul Schein, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. Her dress was of orchid silk marquisette over tulle styled with a fitted bodice, a full skirt, and wrist length sleeves. Her head band was of matching material and she carried a bouquet of yellow roses surrounded with orchid net.

Warren W. Wright, Williamsport, brother of the groom, served as best man.

Ted Cutright, Roanoke, Va., cousin of the bride, Paul Schein and Carl Schein, Williamsport, acted as groomsmen.

The altar was banked with palms, accented by the soft glow from the lighted candles in two seven-branch candelabra.

Miss Ruth France, church organist, presented a program of nuptial music and Charles Driesbach, Columbus, sang, "Because," "I Love You Truly" and "Oh Promise Me."

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents for relatives and close friends.

For the occasion the home was decorated with bouquets of summer garden flowers.

A three tiered wedding cake topped by a miniature bride and groom centered the table on the front porch where buffet refreshments were served. The guests were seated at small tables on the lawn which were decorated with candles and miniature bouquets.

Mrs. Puffinbarger, mother of the bride, greeted her guests dressed in a black summer frock with white accessories and a corsage of pink rose buds.

Mrs. Wright, mother of the bridegroom, wore a black dress with white accessories and pinned to her shoulder was a corsage of pink rose buds.

When the newly weds departed on a wedding trip to Michigan the bride wore a navy blue sheer summer frock with white accessories and pinned to her shoulder was the orchid from her bridal bouquet.

The new Mrs. Wright is a graduate of Williamsport high school and Office Training school, Columbus. Since her graduation she has been employed by the Borden's Ice Cream Company, Columbus.

Mr. Wright was graduated from Williamsport high school. In February of 1943 he entered the service and trained with the 794 bomb squadron where he served as an airplane power plant mechanic. He was stationed in India and after making a trip around the world was discharged from Camp Atterbury, Indiana, in December of 1945. Mr. Wright is now associated in business with his father.

BEWARE OF PIN-WORMS

Medical reports reveal that an amazing number of children and adults are victims of Pin-Worms.

Watch for the warning signs, especially the embarrassing, nagging rectal itch. After centuries of Pin-Worm distress a really effective way to deal with them has been established through JAYNE'S P.W., the new Pin-Worm treatment developed in the laboratories of Dr. D. Jayne & Son.

The small, easy-to-take P-W tablets give satisfaction or your money back. So why take chances on Pin-Worms? If you suspect this ugly infection, ask your druggist for P-W and follow the directions. It's easy to remember: P-W for Pin-Worms!

MURDERER SAID SAFE PLAYMATE FOR CHILDREN

Petty Thief More Dangerous
To Morals, Psychology
Professor Says

BY DON SMITH

United Press Staff Correspondent

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 1—If you want a vacation playmate for Junior, pick a murderer. Junior couldn't have a safer companion.

However, don't send the boy to the seashore with a chronic petty thief or Junior is liable to become just a memory.

That's what Prof. Horace B. English teaches a non-criminal psychology class at Ohio State university.

Prof. English, who has a spotless teaching record, maintained here today that murderers rate as some of the safest people in the world, mainly because they're a "one crime man."

"Once they've murdered, they're very unlikely to kill again or to commit any other crime," English said. It's the chronic petty thief who is the greater menace to society, he claimed.

Our courts and laws use the wrong approach to the crime problem today, English said. And as long as they do, he said, we will be plagued with a great number of crimes.

"As soon as a man commits a crime, the reaction is to get even with him, send him away, punish him," he said. "We must do away with that 'get even' attitude."

"Once a man is convicted of a crime—whether it be for murder or for stealing a postage stamp—he should be sent to prison for an indefinite term and released only when it is believed safe to return him to society," English said.

English said the man should be examined by criminologists, psychiatrists and psychologists while he is in prison.

"You know something is wrong with our present system when you realize that more than 40 per cent of the paroled prisoners are returned to serve out another offense," he asserted.

"Increasing the penalties for crimes won't help," he said. "It's not the fear of the death penalty that keeps people from killing. States without the death penalty generally have a lower murder rate than states that do," English said.

Child murderers released from the Ohio State bureau of Juvenile Research never have committed another murder, he said.

GEO. L. HOWE

Well-known expert of Indianapolis, and ex-U. S. Army Medical Corpsman, will personally demonstrate his method without charge at the Warner Hotel, Chillicothe, Tuesday, August 6th, from 10 a. m. to 2 p. m.

Mr. Howe says the Howe method contracts the openings in remarkably short time on the average case, regardless of the size or location of the rupture and no matter how much you lift or strain, and puts you back to work the same day as efficient as before you were ruptured. The Howe Rupture Shield has no leg straps, waterproof, sanitary, practically indestructible, and can be worn while bathing. Each shield is skillfully molded and fitted to the parts under heat, which gives a perfect fit and satisfaction.

Large and difficult ruptures following operations especially solicited. Do not overlook this opportunity if you want gratifying results. Mailing address P. O. Box 323, E. Main St. Station, Indianapolis 1, Ind.

TWO MEN JOIN ARMY TO SERVE IN CARIBBEAN

Two more men from this area have enlisted in the regular Army, according to an announcement Thursday by S/Sgt. Robert H. Kuhn, in charge of the Army recruiting office in the VFW home, North Court street.

Samuel Rodgers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leman Rodgers, Laurelville

route 2, enlisted for three years in the transportation corps. After he has completed his basic training he will be assigned to the Caribbean defense command. He attended Laurelville school.

Gerald Congrove, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harley Congrove, Laurelville route 1, also plans to serve with the transportation corps. Since his graduation from Laurelville high school he has been working on his father's farm. He will be assigned to the Caribbean defense command.

Both boys believe they have a good future in the Army, Sgt. Kuhn said.

The mystery of the roars emanating from old Rumbling Bald (mountain) at Lake Lure, N. C., has been explained by scientists, who say they are caused by boulders falling from the top of caves deep in the mountain.

TWO MEN JOIN ARMY TO SERVE IN CARIBBEAN

Two more men from this area have enlisted in the regular Army, according to an announcement Thursday by S/Sgt. Robert H. Kuhn, in charge of the Army recruiting office in the VFW home, North Court street.

Samuel Rodgers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leman Rodgers, Laurelville

route 2, enlisted for three years in the transportation corps. After he has completed his basic training he will be assigned to the Caribbean defense command. He attended Laurelville school.

Gerald Congrove, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harley Congrove, Laurelville route 1, also plans to serve with the transportation corps. Since his graduation from Laurelville high school he has been working on his father's farm. He will be assigned to the Caribbean defense command.

Both boys believe they have a good future in the Army, Sgt. Kuhn said.

The mystery of the roars emanating from old Rumbling Bald (mountain) at Lake Lure, N. C., has been explained by scientists, who say they are caused by boulders falling from the top of caves deep in the mountain.

FRANCE, ITALY EXPECTED TO BECOME FRIENDS

Common Problems May Bring Friendship After Many Years Of Enmity

BY VIRGIL PINKLEY
United Press Vice President For Europe.

PARIS, Aug. 1.—France and Italy, at loggerheads for half a century, today face many common problems solution of which paradoxically may lead to friendship and cooperation between these nations.

It is in these two countries with roughly 42,000,000 persons each that the Catholic church and Communism are having a gruelling daily battle.

The contest extends to many other European countries but the issue is perhaps more sharply drawn in these neighboring western European powers.

During recent weeks, as evidenced by elections, Communism either was checked or lost ground. But France as well as Italy must obtain genuine assistance from Communist parties, one of three leading political groups in both countries. The Communists through strikes and non-participation in national governments could sabotage the entire recovery effort.

Italy and France in common with many parts of Europe face food shortages, fantastically high prices, lack of clothes and houses and inadequate transport.

France like Italy, seeks a stable government to permit the application of recovery programs. Both countries suffered heavy ravages of war. Communications and transport were hard hit. Both countries lack highly efficient modern industrial setups.

Of the two nations France, in raw materials, territorial and colonial possessions and agricultural production, was vastly more wealthy but suffers from the effects of a drift toward near bankruptcy in prewar years, plus the corruption of feeble French governments almost continuously between the two world wars.

France and Italy, probably more so France, show clearly the effects of the madness of war. Europeans spent 10 of the last 30 years killing each other, preparing to kill or trying to overcome the destruction, dislocation or exhaustion war causes. France three times in 70 years became a European battlefield.

France and Italy both have gigantic black markets in operation. Both have currencies which still are far from stable and which many of their own citizens distrust.

Both countries have become highly nationalistic. This tendency in Italy is expected to become more pronounced if the peace conference enforces a treaty on Italy which virtually prevents recovery and lowers still more the standard of living.

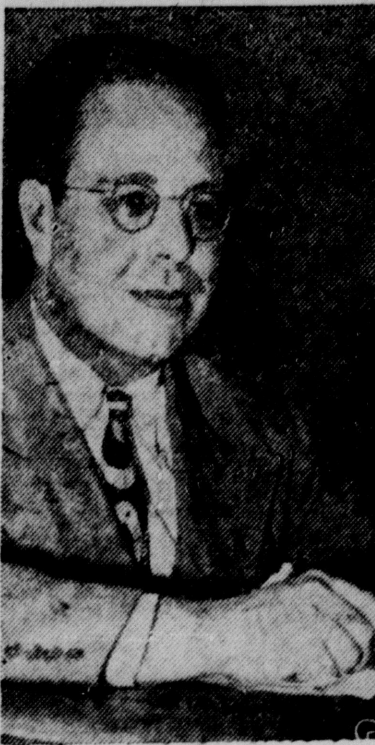

As a result of recent elections in both countries, liberals and the center are winning new power, and confidence is returning, even if slowly. In France there appears some will to work—a will lacking for so many years.

But France urgently needs modern methods and up-to-date machinery which the recent American loan is expected to provide to some degree.

TRIBE LEAD IS CUT; RED BIRDS DEFEAT SAINTS

By United Press
Louisville cut Indianapolis' lead to two and a half games in the American Association today after taking an overtime game from Minneapolis, 5 to 4.

In other games last night, Columbus trimmed St. Paul, 4 to 1, Milwaukee beat Toledo, 10 to 3, and Indianapolis and Kansas City were not scheduled.

Manager Charley Root won the final game of a series with St. Paul by putting himself on the mound. He gave the Saints one run in seven innings before yielding the pitching chores to Johnny Herr. Meanwhile, Columbus tallied four on eight hits and four errors by St. Paul.

TRIBE LEAD IS CUT; RED BIRDS DEFEAT SAINTS

By United Press

Louisville cut Indianapolis' lead to two and a half games in the American Association today after taking an overtime game from Minneapolis, 5 to 4.

In other games last night, Columbus trimmed St. Paul, 4 to 1, Milwaukee beat Toledo, 10 to 3, and Indianapolis and Kansas City were not scheduled.

Manager Charley Root won the final game of a series with St. Paul by putting himself on the mound. He gave the Saints one run in seven innings before yielding the pitching chores to Johnny Herr. Meanwhile, Columbus tallied four on eight hits and four errors by St. Paul.

FEEB LAYERS, CULL SLACKERS, EXPERT ADVISES

Farmers having trouble stretching their poultry feed supply were advised today to cull their flocks and full-feed the layers for profitable egg production. Recent experiments show that skimping the layers increases the cost of producing eggs, according to H. L. Gartner, head of the feed division of the Farm Bureau Cooperative Association, Columbus.

Culling the flock should be a year-round practice, Gartner said, but it is especially important now when feed prices are high and top production is essential. With poultry meat in good demand, there is added incentive to cull, he said.

Poor layers usually reflect their inactivity by exhibiting a small, pale comb that is often scaly. The eyes are dull and her body capacity shrinks to the point where between the pin and keel bones. If the abdomen is fatty, hard and contracted and the vent small, dry and round, the hen should be discarded.

The poor layer's beak and shank may be as yellow as the healthy bird's but she may molt early and slowly. Often she will show many new feathers by early summer. Good layers exhibit the opposite qualities, Gartner said.

WHEAT SALES NEAR RECORDS AT COLUMBUS
COLUMBUS, Aug. 1—Grain elevators reported here today that in the past three weeks they handled wheat crops that approached the production records set immediately after World War I.

The Continental Grain Company, with an elevator capacity of 800,000 bushels, reported it had handled more than one million bushels from this year's crop. Officials expected their elevators would be filled within a few days.

Farmers whose wheat was relatively free of the smut that has appeared in this year's crop received $2 per bushel, but the price has dropped under $1.90.

Elevator operators reported the greatest difficulty was in the shortage of box cars.

BLUE RIBBON, ISALY'S TEAMS CLASH TONIGHT

TOURNAMENT PLAY MOVED BACK AT CHILLICOTHE
Rain forced postponement of play in the district softball tournament at Chillicothe Wednesday night.

All games were moved back. Wednesday night's games are to be played tonight; tonight's games Friday, etc., it was announced by District Commissioner Hugh Jennings.

DYER IS HAPPY AS CARDINALS DRUB DODGERS

Gumbert Comes To Rescue Twice To Give Reds Double Victory

NEW YORK, Aug. 1—Looking nothing at all like the man who had been called dour Eddie Dyer, the Cardinal skipper grinned, crossed his fingers and hoped that the bat-rattling triumph his boys had just turned in over the Dodgers was the turning point of a stubborn slump.

The Cards, clomp-clomping in from the diamond in their spiked shoes, had overpowered Brooklyn, 10 to 3 with a 15-hit attack that included four triples and two doubles. They still trailed the Dodgers by 2 1/2 games but from the shouting and back-slapping they might just as well have won the World Series.

When it finally got quiet enough to hear a bomb drop, Dyer recounted the dismal road record of the club in seven previous games on the current trip and discovered that the Cards had made as many runs in this game as in all the others combined.

Overlooking the extravagance he said that "this may be what we needed—now maybe we can start that drive."

The incredible Bobby Feller held the Red Sox sluggers to one-hit, a second inning single by Bobby Doerr, as he won his 20th game, 4 to 1 at Cleveland. Pitching with only two days of rest, he beat the Red Sox for the second straight time and for the third time this season. Two of the nine walks he gave up led to Boston's run on a steal of home by Wally Moses. He also struck out nine to run his total to 239 for 231 innings this season.

Detroit overtook the dispirited Yankees in second place, using Alton Benton a second-straight pitcher in a 6 to 0 five-hit shutout. Benton, starting for the first time since May 5, scattered five singles while Birdie Tebbets, Hank Greenberg and Dick Wakefield backed him up with home runs.

The White Sox scored all their runs in the ninth to beat the Athletics at Chicago, 3 to 2. Bob Kennedy touching off the rally with a homer. Ed Lopat, who won his sixth game, finally beat the A's after trying for three years.

The Browns put across four runs in the eighth inning to beat the Senators at St. Louis, 6 to 2. Joe Grace hit a two-run homer off Brownie pitcher Nelson Potter in the first inning and that ended the Senator scoring.

Harry Gumbert's fine relief pitching saved two games for the Reds who defeated the Phils at Philadelphia, 4 to 3 in 11 innings, and 2 to 0. After the Reds scored twice in their half of the 11th, the Phils put across one run on rookie Bob Malloy and Gumbert came in to save his victory by striking out the last two batters. In the second game, rookie Ewell Blackwell's fourth shutout and sixth victory was preserved when Gumbert came in and forced Frank McCormick to hit into a ninth inning double play.

The Braves edged Pittsburgh, 2 to 1 at Boston when Connie Ryan tripled home Nanny Fernandez in the ninth. Johnny Sain spoiled his own shutout when he walked four straight men in the fourth. The victory was his 11th.

Claude Passeau, who has been hampered by a lame back, won his first game since June 25, pitching the Cubs to an 8 to 1 victory over the Giants at New York. Chicago made 14 hits including homers by Andy Pafko and Bill Nicholson.

STILL ALIVE—GETS ANGRY

GILLETTE, Wyo. — A Gillette physician knew the meaning of the saying, "that's gratitude for you," recently when he worked virtually all night saving the life of a vagrant who had swallowed poison only to find that the patient, upon awakening, was angry to learn that he was still alive.

FROM SOLDIERS' FIELD, CHICAGO, AUGUST 23 (8:30 p. m., EST to conclusion).

The event, which opens the 1946 football season, will be sponsored by the Wilson Sporting Goods Company. Harry Wismer, one of radio's top sports announcers, will handle the play-by-play account of the event with Johnny Neblett at the microphone to bring the listeners the color and grandstand highlights of this great gridiron classic. The Los Angeles Rams, pro champions, will play the pick of the gridiron luminaries from the colleges of the country in this annual pigskin classic. Sparked by the brilliant half-back Bob Waterfield, the Rams feature one of the most versatile attacks ever developed in the history of football, the wide-open, hipper-dipper style of offense that won the 1945 championship for the Rams, who were then operating out of Cleveland.

Kern's "Blue Skies". Edward Everett Horton, Milena Miller and the King Cole Trio are in charge of the show's comical and vocal interludes. Russ Case directs the orchestra in setting the musical background.

COMMUTER'S TICKET

"Commuter's Ticket," instead of the previously announced "Blue Eyes," will be the starring vehicle for J. Carroll Naish, when the screen actor guests on "Suspense," radio's "theater of thrills," Thursday, at 7 p. m. The story is a hair-raiser, in a railroad setting.

VAUGHN MONROE SHOW

Vaughn Monroe Show as guest star for the broadcast, Thursday, at 9 p. m. Monroe will be heard in two vocal solos, "Tangerine" and "They Say It's Wonderful," and will join with Betty Norton in "Who Told You That Lie." Another melodic episode in the lives of those fabulous hillbillies, Elmer and Ellie Mae, comes up on CBS' "Dick Haymes Show," Thursday, 8 p. m., EST, when maestro Gordon Jenkins and the show's henchmen present their musical extravaganza, "She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain." The simple annals of Elmer and his girl friend were heard in previous production numbers on the half-hour musical. The music is by Jenkins with original lyrics by Tom Adair. With Dick Haymes and Helen Forrest still vacationing, the program features specialty band numbers by the 36-piece orchestra, including "Doing What Comes Naturally" and "South of the Border," the Four Hits and A Miss, the chorus and entire company in Gordon Jenkins' own arrangement of "Temptation" and the swingy Suitcase Six in "Coquette."

CARRINGTON PLAYHOUSE

A battle between King Football and the Bard of Avon, with a pretty dramatic teacher weighing the scales heavily on the side of Shakespeare, is the basis of the amusing tale, "The Show Must Go On," Thursday, (7-7:30 p. m., EST) over Mutual. The captain of the football team takes a fling as Romeo, both actually and dramatically, and winds up in the backfield in both cases.

ALL STAR FOOTBALL

With sports announcers Harry Wismer and Johnny Neblett at the microphone, Mutual will present a special play-by-play broadcast of the 1946 All-Star football game between the Los Angeles Rams, professional football champions, and the College All-Stars, direct

TO CARVE TONGUE

1 Place tongue with rounded side away from carver and tongue tip to carver's right. Remove slices starting at tip end of tongue.

2 Slant knife-cutting from tip to thick end to form uniform slices from entire tongue. Be sure to skim the fat off the tongue water when it is cool, and melt down the tongue roots for salvage.

STILL ALIVE—GETS ANGRY

GILLETTE, Wyo. — A Gillette physician knew the meaning of the saying, "that's gratitude for you," recently when he worked virtually all night saving the life of a vagrant who had swallowed poison only to find that the patient, upon awakening, was angry to learn that he was still alive.

from Soldiers' Field, Chicago, August 23 (8:30 p. m., EST to conclusion).

The event, which opens the 1946 football season, will be sponsored by the Wilson Sporting Goods Company. Harry Wismer, one of radio's top sports announcers, will handle the play-by-play account of the event with Johnny Neblett at the microphone to bring the listeners the color and grandstand highlights of this great gridiron classic. The Los Angeles Rams, pro champions, will play the pick of the gridiron luminaries from the colleges of the country in this annual pigskin classic. Sparked by the brilliant half-back Bob Waterfield, the Rams feature one of the most versatile attacks ever developed in the history of football, the wide-open, hipper-dipper style of offense that won the 1945 championship for the Rams, who were then operating out of Cleveland.

the United States Army Air Forces. Jimmy Doolittle, former Lt. General of the Air Forces and now president of the Air Forces Association, Ronald Regan who will act as master of ceremonies, and Jimmy Stewart, head of the list of stars and celebrities who will appear on this commemorative program, which will originate in Hollywood, Washington and Boston.

MUSIC HALL

A musical program featuring ever-popular hit songs of yesterday will be presented on the Kraft Music Hall, Thursday, at 8 p. m. (EST) over NBC. Eddy Duchin, host of the show, will open by playing a medley of the Irving Berlin semi-classic, "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody" and Jerome Kern's "Blue Skies". Edward Everett Horton, Milena Miller and the King Cole Trio are in charge of the show's comical and vocal interludes. Russ Case directs the orchestra in setting the musical background.

COMMUTER'S TICKET

"Commuter's Ticket," instead of the previously announced "Blue Eyes," will be the starring vehicle for J. Carroll Naish, when the screen actor guests on "Suspense," radio's "theater of thrills," Thursday, at 7 p. m. The story is a hair-raiser, in a railroad setting.

VAUGHN MONROE SHOW

Count Basie, piano-playing maestro, performs a pair of keyboard classics, when he joins the Vaughn Monroe Show as guest star for the broadcast, Thursday, at 9 p. m. Monroe will be heard in two vocal solos, "Tangerine" and "They Say It's Wonderful," and will join with Betty Norton in "Who Told You That Lie." The orchestra plays "Song of the Islands," and teams up with Basie for the finale, "Stompin' at the Savoy."

DICK HAYMES SHOW

Another melodic episode in the lives of those fabulous hillbillies, Elmer and Ellie Mae, comes up on CBS' "Dick Haymes Show," Thursday, 8 p. m., EST, when maestro Gordon Jenkins and the show's henchmen present their musical extravaganza, "She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain." The simple annals of Elmer and his girl friend were heard in previous production numbers on the half-hour musical. The music is by Jenkins with original lyrics by Tom Adair. With Dick Haymes and Helen Forrest still vacationing, the program features specialty band numbers by the 36-piece orchestra, including "Doing What Comes Naturally" and "South of the Border"; the Four Hits and A Miss, the chorus and entire company in Gordon Jenkins' own arrangement of "Temptation" and the swingy Suitcase Six in "Coquette."

CARRINGTON PLAYHOUSE

A battle between King Football and the Bard of Avon, with a pretty dramatic teacher weighing the scales heavily on the side of Shakespeare, is the basis of the amusing tale, "The Show Must Go On," on "The Carrington Playhouse," Thursday, (7-7:30 p. m., EST) over Mutual. The captain of the football team takes a fling as Romeo, both actually and dramatically, and winds up in the backfield in both cases.

ALL STAR FOOTBALL

With sports announcers Harry Wismer and Johnny Neblett at the microphone, Mutual will present a special play-by-play broadcast of the 1946 All-Star football game between the Los Angeles Rams, professional football champions, and the College All-Stars, direct

OWNER SPOTS AUTO DESPITE NEW PAINT JOB

CANTON, O., August 1—Ches-ter M. Riley knew his own auto-mob-ile when he saw it, in spite of a new coat of black paint, orna-mental wheel rim discs and other im-provements.

The car was stolen here June 5. Riley spotted it on a downtown street and gave chase.

The driver eluded Riley who de-cided to spend the rest of the day in search of the auto. He called a friend to help. They cornered the car later in the day and the driver was taken to headquarters.

Riley explained that his car was a maroon color when it was stolen but that it now was black. Donald L. Crawford, 30, admitted to police that he stole the car and had painted it black, bought two new tires, installed ornamental wheel rim discs and a new clutch.

Crawford was scheduled to be arraigned today on a charge of operating a vehicle without the owner's consent.
